

Senate Testimony Reveals Washington Lobby Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators released testimony Thursday that a Washington lobbyist handed out political campaign checks with a free hand while trying to keep friendly Congress members "in" and newcomers "out."

The lawyer-lobbyist, John A. O'Donnell, was pictured as interested in passage of a Philippine war damage bill under which he stood to collect from $150,000 up to almost half a million dollars in fees.

The $73-million bill finally was passed last year, but none of the money has been paid out yet.

Cut Off Fees

Chairman J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., announced he and other members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which developed the story, will try to overturn the bill with an amendment cutting off O'Donnell's fees.

Fulbright said O'Donnell already had collected an estimated $265,000 under a 1956 act authorizing war damage payments to religious groups in the Philippines.

That O'Donnell and a Filipino associate "have been unduly enriched is of less importance than that the legislative process has been subverted," Fulbright said, adding: "Both Congress and the executive were deceived."

O'Donnell acknowledged, Fulbright said, that he had not disclosed in previous testimony before Congress "that he was acting in fact, if not in law, as the agent of foreign principals, and for his own interests."

Fulbright's committee listed numerous congressional figures and others in both parties as alleged recipients of O'Donnell's political campaign contributions.

These were bank cashier's checks ranging from $2,000 down to $100 each and totaling some $8,600. They were handed out in the fall of 1960.

No Violation Of Law

There was no allegation that any of the contributions were in violation of the law.

An aide to the Senate Elections subcommittee said the Corrupt Practices Act apparently makes no reference to foreign lobbyists. He said only national banks, corporations and labor organizations are expressly prohibited from making campaign contributions.

O'Donnell is registered as an agent for the Philippine Sugar Association.

Among those listed in committee records as receiving $2,000 was Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., who introduced the successful war claims damage bill in the House.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., who sponsored the Zablocki bill in the Senate, was mentioned in the transcript as recipient of a $500 campaign check.

A $1,000 donation reportedly went to Edward McCormack, nephew of House Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass., who was running for Massachusetts attorney general at the time.

McCormack's duel with Edward M. Kennedy for last year's Democratic senatorial nomination captured national interest. It was won by the President's younger brother, who went on to win election to the Senate.

O'Donnell, 56, testified at a secret hearing on March 1 that he contributed to McCormack's campaign "because Ed McCormack is a good friend of mine, and I wanted to help him."

Personal Contribution

He said he sent a personal contribution of $100 to McCormack last year for his senatorial primary race.

Generally, however, O'Donnell testified that he was interested in re-electing senators and House members "who were familiar with Philippine affairs and who had exhibited a sympathetic attitude toward them."

The election of new and "essentially uninformed" men, he said, would "endanger the progress of legislation already initiated and present potential obstacles to the future."

O'Donnell contended that the contributions he dispensed from an $18,000 fund provided by his Philippine clients were "unrelated in time and objectives to any specific legislation involving Philippine interests."

Insisting he had done nothing evil or irregular, O'Donnell told the committee it was "the prevalent practice to provide financial support to candidates for public office who appear to represent a viewpoint sympathetic to that expressed by the people I serve."

"I am impelled to become part of the accepted institution," he said.

In addition to handing out the campaign checks, O'Donnell testified he spent about $5,000 for tables at President Kennedy's 1961 birthday anniversary dinner. This money went into Democratic Party coffers.

What was left from the $18,000 supplied by Philippine sugar interests, O'Donnell said, he banked and "reported as professional income for 1960-61." He estimated this at $5,335.50.

Legislation Passed

The legislation passed last year was a follow-up to the 1946 Philippine Rehabilitation Act under which $400 million was appropriated for payment of damage claims arising from World War II action in the islands.

Former President Harry S. Truman named O'Donnell, then an Interstate Commerce Commission lawyer, to a three-member commission set up to administer the 1946 act. The other members were Francisco A. Delgado, a Filipino, and Frank A. Waring.

The $400 million did not cover all of the claims and Fulbright said O'Donnell and Delgado "conceived the purpose of obtaining enactment of further legislation which would result in great financial benefit to themselves."

Supplemental bills have been introduced in several congresses, starting in 1961, but none of them passed until last year. Passage came only after the House killed one version of the bill. There was no record vote in either House or Senate when the 1962 bill passed.

The bill provides for payment of damages directly to individual claimants, and Fulbright said it is significant that the payments are to be made on claims which O'Donnell and Delgado themselves "had adjudicated as members of the (1946) commission."

U.S. Has Small Advantage Over Reds In N-Submarines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States now has only a very small numerical advantage over the Soviet Union in atomic-powered submarines, Adm. George W. Anderson says.

The statement by the chief of naval operations—which comes in the face of popular belief that the United States has been holding a decisive lead in this portion of the arms race — is contained in testimony before a House Appropriations subcommittee in February. A censored version was made public Thursday.

Anderson said he had expressed this view to President Kennedy in discussing cutbacks by the Defense Department in the submarine building program. The House subsequently voted authorization for two atomic-powered attack submarines the Pentagon had cut from the Navy's original request for eight.

Anderson said his representations to Kennedy were made while the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff met with the President at Palm Beach, Fla., in December. The published transcript did not show whether Anderson had given a comparison of the numerical strengths of the two submarine navies.

The latest count shows 30 U.S. atomic submarines in the water, of which 27 are operating and three others launched and in the process of dockside completion and fitting out. Another, the Thresher, was lost last week. Of the 27 operating 16 are attack types, 11 are missile-firing ships of which 10 are Polaris and one rigged for surface launching the air-breathing Regulus missile.

More Than 20

The Soviet Union is estimated slightly more than 20 atomic-powered submarines in operation. Most of them are believed to be attack types, but Anderson said submarines are in operation.

Anderson and Secretary of the Navy Fred Korth told the subcommittee that the program now is to provide a total of 41 Polaris submarines. The goal for atomic attack submarines is 39.

The major mission for attack submarines is antisubmarine warfare. This mission has become critically important with the approach of the time when the Soviet Union will have a significant number of her own Polaris-type subs in operation.

The presence of missile-launcher submarines in the Soviet fleet poses a serious threat to the United States, Anderson testified.

"In a situation wherein the enemy undertakes a pre-emptive attack, it is probable that an active defense could not be prosecuted against missile-carrying submarines," he said.

However, he added that intelligence gained prior to attack might aid in tracking down enemy submarines before they could fire missiles.

Officer Tells Court Mechanical Faults Plagued Thresher

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (AP)—An officer who missed the nuclear submarine Thresher's final rendezvous with disaster told a Navy court Thursday the craft was plagued by mechanical faults but said all that had been discovered were corrected before her fatal dive April 10.

Called as a witness as the Navy court of inquiry resumed hearings was Lt. Raymond McCool, the Thresher's electrical officer. McCool, 33, father of five, explained he missed the submarine's last voyage because of an eye injury suffered by his wife in the kitchen of their Dover, N.H., home.

Listing troubles aboard the Thresher, he said:

Continuing Problem

The air systems were a continuing problem. High-pressure reducers frequently had to be replaced because they would open a valve and let high-pressure air pass.

Some 20 per cent of the submarine's hydraulic system valves opened when a "closed" switch was thrown—and vice versa.

The raising and lowering mechanism of the periscope worked backward.

Engine bearings had to be replaced.

A fast-cruise test, started March 23, was cut short after two days by the Thresher's skipper, Cmdr. John W. Harvey, because of discovery of mechanical deficiencies.

On the night of April 8—the day before Thresher sailed for her fatal deep-dive test 220 miles east of Boston carrying 129 men to their deaths—Portsmouth shipyard workers were correcting, McCool said, what he described as sail and rudder planes. He said he was told there were errors in the planes and angle indicators but expressed belief these were not a major item—"one that required minor adjustment."

McCool emphasized, however, that all the mechanical faults discovered had been corrected. He repeatedly voiced the personal feeling that none of the problems he was outlining to the court could have affected Thresher's safety.

Attack Submarine

He said the nuclear attack submarine had "a happy, highly competent crew."

Before McCool was called to the witness stand, the commanding officer of the Portsmouth naval shipyard, where Thresher was built and recommissioned, voluntarily was made "an interested party" in the inquiry—entitled to be represented by counsel.

He is Rear Adm. Charles A. Palmer. He told the court he has a direct interest in the submarine Thresher and its investigation and asked to be named an interested party in the proceeding.

Also designated by the court an interested party was Lt. Cmdr. Stanley W. Hecker, 36, of Brooklyn, N.Y., commander of the submarine escort vessel Skylark which was with the Thresher on its last dive.

The court explained it named Hecker as an interested party for failing to report the Threshers' last message to higher authority for an unreasonable length of time. But the court stressed he could in no way be held accountable for the loss of the submarine.

New Fighting In Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Premier Souvanna Phouma angrily turned on his erstwhile Pathet Lao partners Thursday. He accused the pro-Communist Laotians of breaking promises and launching new attacks on his neutralist forces that may again bring civil war to Laos.

He departed from a prepared speech to declare that he had just received word the Pathet Lao had launched a new attack on Phoung Savan, the last major neutralist position outside the Plaine des Jarres.

Phoung Savan is about 10 miles northeast of the Plaine des Jarres, where the bulk of Gen. Kong Le's neutralist troops now are bottled up. The premier said the Pathet Lao also was trying to force the neutralist garrison from Ban Ban, about 24 miles northeast of the Plaine.

Souvanna asserted that the Pathet Lao is trying to destroy his loyal neutralist forces and to dominate neutralist-controlled zones in the divided country.

He said the campaign, if it succeeds, will plunge Laos back into the civil war that plagued it before the Geneva agreement last July guaranteeing Laos' neutrality.

Rep. Walter Is Back In Hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Francis E. Walter re-entered the Georgetown Hospital for a new series of tests concerning a respiratory condition of long standing, his physician said last night.

Dr. Darrell C. Crain said the 69-year-old Walter had been in the hospital for about one week and is expected to remain for another week.

Crain said Walter's condition is not serious and that he is "up and around" in his room.

Walter had been in the same hospital for similar tests during a three-week period in January.

Fire Destroys Food Plant

BATAVIA, N. Y. (AP)— Fire wrecked a food-processing plant on the city's east end Thursday night and threatened for a time to force evacuation of nearby homes because of a reported threat of exploding gas.

Police said no evacuation was necessary.

Firemen reported the fire under control about 1½ hours after they arrived at the three-story main building of the Walls Bean and Grain Co. plant.

The fire did not reach several propane gas tanks in a warehouse. Most of the main building and part of the warehouse were leveled, firemen said.

Scranton States No Change In Tax Plans On Clothing

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Scranton declared emphatically Thursday there will be no change in his tax plans to exempt children's clothing and there will be no amnesty for backlogged traffic violators.

Most of the weekly meeting with newsmen was taken up with the two subjects, including a reported motor code violation by Arthur McGonigle of Reading, defeated GOP candidate for governor in 1958.

Discussed Exemptions

Scranton last week discussed possible exemptions on children's wear in his proposal to raise sales tax to 4½ per cent and extend it to clothing. Some persons felt the governor might be giving a hint of his plans.

Asked specifically whether there might be an allowance on children's clothing, Scranton said: "I'm not considering such an exemption. Last week was merely a discussion. Frankly, I think it is an administrative headache."

Scranton stiffened again when asked whether he could accept changes by the legislature, which has been extremely apprehensive over the $139 million tax package.

"I don't plan to accept any alternatives. This is the best way with the least injury to people."

Backlog

The governor said Harry H. Brainerd, traffic safety commissioner, reported that he could eliminate a backlog of $30,000 violation suspension and driver re-examination cases.

"We intend to clean up this backlog in the next 30 days without overtime or without putting on additional help," Brainerd told the governor in a formal report.

Brainerd, who was at the news conference, blamed most of the backlog on Democrats who allegedly slowed suspensions in an election year.

Asked specifically whether any of the back citations would be dropped, Scranton said: "There will be no amnesty."

Brainerd said in the future his bureau will enforce strictly a section of the motor code which requires the minor judiciary to submit reports of traffic convictions on the 10th day of each month for the preceding month. Violation of the section carries a $50 fine, Brainerd said.

Other Highlights

Other highlights: McGonigle—Scranton stood solidly behind Brainerd's decision to return to McGonigle his driver's license which has been with the bureau since April 4.

"I am convinced Mr. Brainerd's statement should rest there. I have complete confidence in his administration of the bureau," said the governor.

Gambling — The governor said he had not seen new House bills to legalize pinball machines and other devices, but added: "My position is well known that legalizing gambling doesn't make it right."

Goddard Defends His Budget Request

HARRISBURG (AP) — Forests and Waters Secretary Maurice Goddard philosophized Thursday that, in theory, it would be ideal to run the state's fish and game programs under one conservation department.

However, Goddard told a joint House-Senate legislative appropriations committee: "I don't want anyone to walk out of here saying I'm recommending it. I'm not. I'm just saying that in theory you can't argue against it."

Goddard appeared before the legislators to defend his budget request of $9,026,733 for the 1963-64 fiscal year. That is $619,019 less than the department is receiving this current fiscal year.

Much of the interrogation of the secretary dealt with the fish-game situation and Project 70, a proposed constitutional amendment authorizing a $70 million bond issue to purchase land for recreational uses.

Under questioning from Rep. H. Jack Seltzer, R-Lebanon, Goddard acknowledged that bringing the state's fish and game programs under one department "in theory . . . is the proper way to do it."

But he emphasized that he was speaking theoretically.

"Accomplishing this would be difficult," he said. "I notice they don't want to combine themselves."

The fish and game commissions operate as independent agencies. Goddard, despite his philosophy, refused to be drawn into criticism of either agency.

"We operate on different purposes," he said. "Ours is multipurpose while theirs is more specialized."

Project 70 came in for discussion when Goddard, in answer to a question, said the department's land acquisition planning was based on the passage and voter approval of the bond issue.

Goddard's reply prompted House Appropriations Chairman Blaine C. Hooker to comment: "It seems as though you're dragging your feet on land acquisition depending on Project 70 going through. I think they're (the voters) going to turn you down."

Goddard countered: "You fellows pass it in the legislature and I'll see what I can do with the voters."

Democratic Secretary of Internal Affairs Genevieve Blatt brought her budget request of $1,694,000 before the Republican-controlled appropriations committee.

She said it represented a "modest increase" of $140,000 over this year's appropriation.

Request Larger Nuclear Bomb

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two top U.S. military leaders feel the United States should develop a 100-megaton nuclear bomb to match the Soviet Union although the official Pentagon position is that such superweapons have no real military value.

Gen. Curtis E. Lemay, Air Force chief of staff, and Gen. David M. Shoup, commandant of the Marine Corps, say the United States must have such a weapon if the policy of mutual deterrence is to be preserved. In addition, Shoup sees in the superbomb some destructive capability not present in smaller ones.

The biggest nuclear weapon the United States can now deliver is understood to be in the 24-megaton range. It is carried by a B52 bomber. U.S. ballistic missiles pack a five-megaton wallop. A megaton is the equivalent of the blast of a million tons of TNT.

Report Of Meeting Told In Document

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Dr. Jose Miro Cardona quit Thursday as president of the Cuban Revolutionary Council and charged that President had backed out on a promise of a second invasion of Cuba.

"His offers of cooperation were definite and his support absolute and total," Miro said in a 6,500-word document released to newsmen after he stalked out of the council meeting.

Position Changed

The United States then changed its position, he said, forced Cuban exiles to halt their raids against the Fidel Castro regime, and resigned itself to the presence of Russian troops in Cuba.

Miro said that after the 1962 Punta del Este conference in Uruguay, in which hemispheric pressure of Cuba was voted, he and Manuel Antonio de Varona conferred in Washington with State Department officials about how to get invasion prisoners in Cuba released.

Miro said that after the 1962 Punta was voted, he and Varona conferred in Washington with Cuba released.

Miro said he conferred with Richard Goodwin, "one of the closest collaborators of the President" on various aspects of the Cuban problem.

"Instead of answering, he asked questions," Miro said. "His attitude contrasted, in my belief, with personal assurances expressed to me by the honorable President in interviews held May 4 and July 13 and reiterated by letter on Sept. 25."

"As Mr. Goodwin treated my questions on Cuba with visible lack of enthusiasm, I asked for an interview with President Kennedy."

"We were sent to a new person, Mr. George Bundy. The conversation was courteous but cold. Indecision, delays, vagueness. He did not define his position."

Important Dates

Miro said April 20 and May 4 of 1961 were "important dates."

"The 20th of April 1961, the honorable President Kennedy—who with exemplary honesty in a chief executive—had taken all the responsibility for the disastrous (Bay of Pigs) experiment, also declared his 'decision not to abandon Cuba', and announced to the hemisphere that if the other nations of Latin America did not do their duty the United States would comply with its obligations under the inter-American treaties and agreements."

"Fourteen days later—the 4th of May, after I returned from a trip to Nicaragua, Guatemala and the island of Vieques at his suggestion" in an "anxious search for survivors, President Kennedy in an interview planned with me the immediate future of Cuba."

"His offers of cooperation were definite and his backing was total and absolute."

"It was by his personal decision that the permanent financial aid was made possible to the widows and orphans of the expeditionaries."

"In the same way, support was made possible for the underground forces in Cuba, and the first program of recruitment of Cuban volunteers in the various military units of the United States was planned for a training period of short duration—later they were to be grouped with their own officers in one army corps at a time when we should decide would be opportune."

Miro's Statement

Miro's statement added: "The hemisphere ranks closed solidly behind the Cuban struggle and exile; the right of individual and collective defense of the nations of America in danger was consecrated; other measures were agreed upon."

"The diplomatic negotiations (had been completed) and now we could begin the other one again, that is, military action. All indications were that we had witnessed the beginning of great events."

Miro said that in Washington he conferred with Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, expressed concern over Goodwin's vagueness, and was told that, "The policy of the President has not changed."

The attorney general later asked him to go to the President's house, he said. Goodwin was there.

Miro said Kennedy assured him that the "problem is essentially military and requiring six divisions," and that the council should contribute the major content of soldiers, "and that we position because this would cause grave criticism in the continent."

The President "listened attentively to my point of view and reiterated his request that Cubans continue training in military units," Miro said. The reference was to special training of exiles at U.S. military bases.

He said the President told him: "Your destiny is to suffer. Don't weaken. You have my support. And I reiterate to you my earlier pronouncements."

Miro said he left the conference with the President "with the certainty that liberation was near for our country, with Cubans in the vanguard of combat."

The Cuban leader said the United Nations was deaf to Cuban exile appeals.

At the start of the council meeting, Miro submitted his resignation, then told newsmen they could have copies of his controversial document.

Clasping his hands in an apparent effort to still a tremble, he said he did not plan to leave the United States.

Solemnly, he shook hands with associates and left the council headquarters. A Cuban jumped up and shouted: "Viva Miro. You are the Cuban public."

Seven Youths Arrested

LEHIGHTON — State Police here have arrested seven Palmerton youths on charges of Statutory rape involving a 14-year-old Palmerton girl.

Released on $1,000 bail each after appearing before Justice of the Peace Melba Kobal, Lehigh RD 4, were Brian Bennett, 20, of 412 Fourth St.; Terry Lee Ballet, 18, of 241 Lehigh Ave.; Ronald Lee Vogel, 20, of 653 Franklin Ave.; Sterling Stanley Eckhart, 21, of 754 Edgemont Ave.; Joseph Francis Grohotolski, 19, of 547 Hazard Rd., and Harry Ray Shollenberger, 18, of 1231 Third St.

The seventh defendant, Harold William Fronheiser, 18, of 404 Ridge St., was held in default of bail in Carbon County Jail. The seven are expected to have a hearing the week of April 21.

Troopers said the charges are the result of an incident in Lower Townwensing Township near the Blue Ridge Country Club about 8:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Discussions On Space Are Urged

WASHINGTON (AP)—A government space scientist Thursday urged freer and earlier public discussion of any proposals for government space or other experiments that might adversely affect science or human welfare.

Dr. Fred S. Singer, chief of the U.S. Weather Bureau's Weather Satellite Center, at the same time verbally needled the Air Force-backed Project Needles, which he said was an example of a venture kept secret too long before it was attempted. He said this secrecy resulted in unnecessary international furor.

Singer said, however, that there has been some improvement in the Kennedy administration toward promoting early discussion of such projects.

Project Needles, tried in October 1961, was an attempt to put 50 million copper needles into a 2,000-mile high orbit above the earth in a test of potential new methods of long-range radio communication. Many scientists in the United States and abroad voiced fears the affect radio astronomy and other scientific studies.

The test turned out to be unsuccessful. The needles remained in a tight ball in space and were never distributed in the wide belt planned.

Actually, Singer said, there never was any possibility that this particular experiment could significantly affect scientific experiments on earth. But he said failure to open it up to international discussion from its very conception resulted in a feeling of frustration among many scientists.

Area Resorts, Camps Up To $322,580 In Hospital Fund

POCONO Mountains resorts and camps have subscribed $322,580 to the expansion fund of Monroe County General Hospital, it was announced at a meeting of the Hospital Resort Committee yesterday.

Walter Penney, Sr., chairman of the hospital's steering committee, said the amounts represents more than 25 per cent of the $1,205,000 raised last year.

He said the resort committee, headed by Mrs. E. Holt Wyckoff, Jr., and Mrs. Edmund Strickland, will assist resorts in planning their summer program to meet their hospital commitment.

Twenty teams of two members each will be assigned to the project.

The members of the committee are:

John Grogan, John Tomanid, Mrs. Max Berman, Mrs. Henry J. Krug, Mrs. Charles R. Bensinger, Jr., Mrs. Eugene P. Powers, Mrs. Harold E. Ingraham, Mrs. Edmund E. Leamy, Mrs. Walter R. Mrs. Charles E. Swisher, Jr., John R. Wellington, J. W. Dunlop, Mrs. Edward C. Hess, Mrs. Foster S. Minnich, Henry R. Baustein, Mrs. Olaf J. Pederson, and Mrs. Roman J. Batory.

The theme of the meeting was centered on methods used successfully in the past and the necessity for repetitive programs in order that all guests during the season may participate.

The Camp Committee, under Chairman Louis Sherr, William Y. Saltzman and Mrs. James P. Lynch, will meet at a later date. Peeney in thanking the committee for their consent to serve said, "The importance of your efforts cannot be overemphasized. Bids were opened on March 28 and the total far exceeds our resources at the moment. Thus, it is necessary that the resorts, as all of the rest of us, meet our pledge in full—and those that can—give again!"

The committee was asked to report in one month.

Poconos Discussed As Home For Philadelphia Symphony

Summer Stand Here Aim Of Committee

By Bobby Westbrook
Family Fare Editor

THE Poconos as a permanent "summer home" for one of the world's greatest symphonies, The Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, moved a step nearer realization yesterday with the authorization of a permanent committee to explore finances, sites, construction, and program at a breakfast meeting at Pocono Manor Inn.

Backed by the prestige and influence of the "big guns" of the resort area, acted favorably upon by the Pocono Chamber of Commerce, and the subject of enthusiastic community comment, the prospects for creating an International Music Festival to rival the Berkshire Festival look brighter.

The proposal was first made at a meeting of community leaders in late March, initiated by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. That proposal was summarized yesterday by John Crandall, host at the breakfast.

Two-Part Plan

It included:
1) the construction of a music shell, protected seating for 3,000 persons with additional accommodations for several thousand more, together with necessary parking and other facilities.

2) an initial season of perhaps two weeks of eight concerts of the same quality of program, guest artist and artistic excellence which has made the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra one of the world's most famous.

Financial estimate of the cost of construction was $75,000, and the cost of the concert series at about $100,000 with 80 per cent of that amount to be secured through ticket sales.

Early this week, a second proposal was made by the Philadelphia to give a single "trial run" concert in the Poconos on Sept. 9 of this year. Requirements included an auditorium capable of seating 1,000 people. Ticket sales, averaging $5, would raise $5,000 of the $10,000 estimated cost of the performance with the balance to be raised through patrons.

Triggers Meeting

It was this proposal which triggered yesterday's meeting. Despite the short notice, there was 100 per cent attendance with representatives from the Pocono Mountain Chamber of Commerce and the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau; from the major resorts: The Inn at Buck Hill Falls, Skytop Lodge, Shawnee Inn, Tamiment in the Poconos, and Pocono Manor; from the Tobyhanna Army Depot; from the world of music and from press and radio.

First to react to the proposal was Ben Josephson of Tamiment which promotes its own musical festivals each summer.

The Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Eugene Ormandy needs no "trial run" to prove that it is one of the world's greatest. Josephson contended in advocating that all efforts be directed toward establishing the Poconos as a permanent summer home for the orchestra rather than toward a "one-shot" concert.

Such a "summer home" for the Philadelphia Symphony with a centrally-located cultural center was also endorsed by many others who saw in it inestimable advantages for the whole community with international significance.

The problems were also discussed.

Attendance and ticket sales was not considered as one of those problems. The experience of the Berkshire Festival and the sell-out performances of the Philadelphia Symphony at home and in concerts around the world were cited as indications of the growing public support of such cultural use of increasing leisure time.

The initial investment in necessary facilities, while a major factor, was also considered secondary to the major problem. That problem is the deficit incurred by all symphony orchestras, even those playing to capacity audiences. It is a problem shared by the International Music Festival and with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

One suggestion was to have a subcommittee visit the Berkshires to explore how they had solved the problem of annual subsidies as well as inspecting the physical set-up and other community by-products.

Cover Nearby Areas

Another suggestion was to survey the Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, Allentown-Bethlehem areas as well as the Poconos in a series of test meetings of potential patrons, and exploring the possibility of the Philadelphia Orchestra's patrons extending their support to the "summer home" continuation of the regular season.

In offering the formal motion of authorization of a permanent committee, Edward C. Jenkins of Skyline Inn offered encouragement. The Poconos almost did it 20 years ago while still in their infancy, he recalled, when the committee negotiating with the basis had secured practically all of the pledges necessary for the initial season when the war intervened.

Bigger now and being drawn closer to the metropolitan centers of the East with each completed section of the intercontinental highways, it looks as if the Poconos might just possibly do it this time.

Scranton Names Two More Aides

HARRISBURG (AP)—Gov. Scranton Tuesday appointed two men to $10,500-a-year jobs as workmen's compensation referees and sent the four-year appointments to the Senate for confirmation.

Appointed were attorney Edward S. Stiteler, Greensburg, Westmoreland County, and Attorney James J. Ligi, Peckville, Lackawanna County.

Stiteler was named to replace Felix E. Vittone of Latrobe. Ligi was named to replace attorney John R. Lendham of Scranton, both of whose terms expired.

Reform Or Harassment?

It begins to look, in a number of instances, as if so-called "tax reform" is being used as an attractive argument in favor of what amounts to more tax harassment.

An example is found in Treasury proposals to change the rules on the taxation of distributions from pension and profit sharing plans.

These plans have proven to be among the most versatile and effective of employee relations tools. They are a force behind greater and more efficient industrial production—which, certainly, is one of this nation's primary needs in this almost savagely competitive world. The sums owing to an individual are built up over a long period of time—perhaps as much as 40 years. Most retired employees prefer to take their accumulations in a lump sum, rather than in installments. And it is important to note that, according to a recent survey, more than 90 percent lump sum distributions were to persons in the under-$10,000 annual compensation range.

The Treasury proposal's basic intention can be simply explained. It would change the established method of taxing these payments, to the severe detriment of the recipients. At present, a capital gains method of taxation is employed. The new method, as suggested by the Treasury, would inject new and expensive complexities. Yet, according to the Treasury's own estimates, it would bring in only $8 million in additional revenue.

A spokesman for the Council of Profit Sharing Industries says that adoption of the Treasury proposals "will discourage the continuance of existing profit sharing plans and the establishment of new ones." Is that consistent with the avowed administration objective of stimulating the national economy at home, and improving our ability to compete abroad?

Opinions Of Other Editors

Bar Would Revamp Courts

Results of the referendum among the membership of the Pennsylvania Bar Association on 26 questions dealing with the revision of the State Constitution disclose that while the proposal for the revamping of the judicial system brought out the strongest opposition, it nevertheless was favored by the lawyers, 1,671 to 548. Of approximately 7,000 members of the association, only about 2,500 returned their ballots.

The proposed revised judiciary article had been under fire from the presiding judges of the state's two appellate courts—Chief Justice John C. Bell of the Supreme Court and President Judge Chester H. Rhodes of the Superior Court.

Their criticism generally was that the proposed reorganization plan would virtually make the Chief Justice a "czar" of the state's courts. Seniority, which now designates the Chief Justice, the Superior Court's president judge and the president judges of all of the county

Common Pleas Courts, would no longer govern.

The Chief Justice would be elected by members of the Supreme Court. He would then have the power to name the president judge of the Superior Court and the presiding judges of all Common Pleas Courts.

Judge Rhodes criticized the judicial overhauling in a talk to the local bar last month. We then expressed our agreement with his stand and we now reiterate it.

The vote of the lawyers is an unofficial expression and the final decision will rest with either the voters through the adoption of constitutional amendments or with delegates to a constitutional convention.

We think the seniority provision has worked pretty well and we are not impressed by the idea of setting up a "czar" for the courts of our Commonwealth.

'I Hope It Never Rings in Anger!'

The Pennsylvania Story

Fiscal Gabfests

By Mason Denison
Harrisburg — Reporter's Notebook:

Half-Billion Dollar Scrutiny — In three days of hearings this week the joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee in its current series of departmental budget hearings whipped through nine state agencies whose proposed appropriations total around $96,000,000 — decidedly better than half of the administration's entire projected $112 billion general fund budget!

The fiscal gabfests ran the gamut this week — from the $48,500 appropriation requested to run the Lieutenant - Governor's Office to the whopping biggest — of — any — department appropriation of $532 million for the Department of Public Instruction.

Curiously, when the department hearings were scheduled, the time allotted for the big DPI spender of better than a half-billion dollars was only about an hour, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m., while the Department of Commerce with only a $19 million budgetary tag drew a two-hour schedule — and Department of Forests and Waters with only a $9 million tag was slated for 2½ hours. . . . How long for the $48-

500 for Lieutenant - Governor Raymond P. Shafer? . . . Thirty minutes! . . . Curiously too, nearly two hours was scheduled for the Department of Banking — which has an appropriation request for $164,531 . . .

On The Other Hand . . . — Recently Milton J. Shapp, sometime Philadelphia industrialist and would-be government reformist, published and distributed a booklet entitled "PRR-NYC Spells Economic Ruin for Pennsylvania" in strong opposition to the proposed merger of the two giant rail systems. . . . The booklet, duly forwarded to editors, was an intriguing treatise and presented a formidable picture as to how (a la Shapp) Pennsylvania's economy would indeed go to pot.

This week "the other side" appeared — from the Pennsylvania Railroad — in the form of two mimeographed sheets. . . . Said the PRR simply:

"Perhaps the attached list (of plants) is the best answer to Mr. Shapp's allegations, as these 73 plants (listed on the second mimeo sheet) were located on our line in the state of Pennsylvania in a 14-month period following renewal of merger negotiations between the PRR and the New York Central Railroads in November, 1961 — and covering the period between August 20, 1962 and December 4, 1962, during which the railroads' basic case was presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission and our witnesses being cross-examined."

Tax Need Elimination! — With proper tooling of a few battered bugles and what-not, Governor Scranton this week announced an estimated annual savings of around $10½ million through the abolition of what he termed "nearly 2500 unnecessary positions" from the state payroll.

"If this is the case," snapped one (anti-administration) legislative stalwart, "then we can virtually eliminate increasing the tax on cigarettes one cent a pack, as the Governor has proposed to provide additional revenue of $13 million!"

Looking at it another way, the 2500 "liquidated" state payroll jobs averaged in pay $4200 a year, on the basis of the $10½ million savings reported by Mr. Scranton.

Two Score Plus — For many an older around Capitol Hill it's hard to believe that Dr. Thomas L. Guyton, director of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture, will actually retire May 1, as he indicated this week — after more than 40 years as a career state employee.

Dr. Guyton (Ph.D. — Ohio State '23) first came with the department as state entomologist back in 1918 during the administration of Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh and in his quiet, determined, bog-poring manner sailed through part of the Democratic Earle Administration back in the 1930's, subsequent Republican administrations and the two more recent Democratic Leaders and Lawrence administrations.

(Dr. Guyton has quite a collection of bugs incidentally. . . . One driver is labeled the "Oh My Drawer" this being a drawer full of exotic bugs which he pulls out for visiting school kids and adults who inevitably exclaim: "Oh My!" . . .)

The Allen-Scott Report

Castro's Future

By Robert L. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — Those angry State Department denials notwithstanding, President Kennedy is saying things privately regarding Cuba that he is giving no hint of publicly.

An indisputable illustration is his statement to a score of editors that Fidel Castro may be assassinated.

The President made this startling forecast at a recent White House luncheon for Maryland and Delaware editors. At the time, there was no disclosure of what he said.

Subsequently, Roger Farquhar, editor of the Montgomery, Md., Sentinel, published a detailed and glowing account of this meeting. Obviously greatly impressed at dining with the President, Farquhar wrote about him and his comments in a most friendly vein.

For that reason, the Maryland editor's disclosures are particularly significant. He cannot be charged with giving a critical account. Following is his report of the President's remarks regarding Cuba and Castro:

"During the 90 minutes the President lunched with us, he covered a wide range of subjects. He is obviously proud of the major setback the Communists suffered as a result of the missile withdrawal. An American President, if he were subjected to such an indignity would be impeached, he said.

"The Russian withdrawal from Cuba hurt Castro and the Cuban dictator may have been destroyed as a symbol. The President put forth a strong argument against outright invasion of Cuba by the United States. Many innocent Cubans would be killed if that were to happen, he said.

"And he added that there are signs of unrest in Cuba that could topple Castro, possibly even lead to his assassination.

"To a question as to whether he would prefer to have a few Russians stay in Cuba, rather than have a completely unpredictable Castro solely in charge, the President said firmly he believes it would be better if all the Russians got out."

Farquhar relates the President feels definite gains have been made "against the Communists in Laos, Berlin and Cuba." What these alleged gains are was not indicated.

"The President also expressed impatience," reports Farquhar, "with those who oppose him on trying to work out a test ban, and he cited the frustrations of trying to negotiate disarmament with the Communists."

The charmed editor, with unabashed pride, told his readers "about a dozen waiters hovered around the table bringing good-tasting things that were described in French on the menu," and that "just before the finger bowls and the dessert (Vacherin glace Moka) arrived, the President started by saying he was honored to have us there."

Farquhar concludes his flattering recital with, "It was an experience none of us will ever forget."

The Pay-Off — Senator Ted Kennedy still has a long way to go to make good on his campaign promise "to do more for Massachusetts," but his electioneering henchmen already are cashing in handsomely.

Latest to do so is Edward Moss, former manager of the Worcester office of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., who has been given a $15,000 job as civilian aide to Army Secretary Cyrus Vance. His chief function will be to "represent Vance at military affairs around the country."

Moss owes this juicy patronage plum entirely to Senator Kennedy.

The President's 31-year-old brother made good use of Moss in his slam-bang drive for the Democratic senatorial nomination. Moss labored mightily to swing convention delegates to Kennedy. One effort brought Moss some uncomfortable publicity.

Mrs. Gertrude Daley, Berkshire, Mass., a delegate supporting former State Attorney General Edward McCormack, changed Moss' telephone her if she would switch to his brother. The incident as related by Mrs. Daley is as follows:

"Moss came to my apartment and spent a lot of time trying to get me to switch to Ted Kennedy. I told him I loved the Kennedys, but that enough is enough. Also that I didn't think Ted had any experience, while Eddie McCormack is older and has come up through the ranks. Moss even tried to get my daughter-in-law to persuade me to change over. But she would not interfere.

"A few days later, he called and asked if I would change my mind if the President himself phoned and asked me to vote for Ted. Moss said he could arrange such a call quite easily. I told him 'no.'"

This published account was termed "utterly ridiculous" by Moss. He admitted trying to induce Mrs. Daley to shift to young Kennedy, but flatly denied he had "ever invoked the President's name."

While electioneering for Ted, Moss continued on the payroll of the telephone company — a subsidiary of AT&T. He asserted he was doing political work on his own time in the evening and on weekends.

Secretary Vance's office had no comment on Moss' qualifications to "represent him at military affairs." Moss' government salary considerably exceeds what he had been getting.

Cuban Flashes — Admiral George Anderson, Chief of Naval Operations, told a private meeting of the House Appropriations Committee that it would take a full scale blockade to prevent the export of Communists agents from Cuba. In response to a question, Anderson said, nothing short of such extreme measures would adequately do his job.

Off The Record:

Cabinet Member And Ex-Solon

—By BOB CLARK

Editor's Note: Robert L. Clark, city editor of The Daily Record, recently took part in an editor's seminar on state government. Clark listened to the governor, cabinet members and his press aides in three days and nights of conferences. These are his impressions and findings in a series of articles. Today's is on "A Cabinet Member And Rules And Regulations."

The man in the middle. That's what they call William Young, Secretary of Labor and Industry in Gov. Scranton's cabinet.

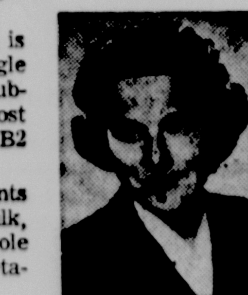

A dedicated man, Young, the first Negro to be named to a state cabinet post, isn't worried on surface that he is in between a staunch labor advocate and just as hardy management advocate in his department.

A politician from the ground up, Young is out to do a job in the best way he knows how.

The resident of Pittsburgh is taking positive action in an attempt to cure the state's unemployment skills. He is out to establish "an equal partnership" between labor and management.

Young, valedictorian of his graduating class at Lincoln University, has set his sights on finding spots for "unskilled labor." He plans to create a needed feeling for those who have carried an "unneeded" burden for years.

Another prime goal established by Young and his department aides is a pressing promotion program to take away the seasonal resort atmosphere and set up a year around economical situation.

DEAR GRITTING: Call your clergyman and suggest that he consider getting an organist—or educating the piano player.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter and her husband are planning a trip to Europe. We offered to keep their two pre-school children during their six-week trip, and they had the nerve to ask us to keep their dog! I don't care for dogs and neither does my husband. My daughter says it will spoil her trip if they have to put the dog in a kennel. She's afraid he might be mistreated or maybe die of homesickness. Are we wrong in refusing to keep him? Or are they wrong for insisting?

Asian Flu
Has vaccination against the Asian flu been successful?

J. E. O., Nevada
Dear Mr. O.: In the fall of 1962, health authorities recommended early vaccination against the Asian influenza. It is now their opinion that those who were vaccinated either did not get the disease or got a very mild form of it.

NO DOGS
DEAR NO: It is cruel to force an animal on people who dislike animals. The dog deserves better. Explain this to your daughter. Don't let her talk you into anything or it shouldn't happen to a dog.

DEAR ABBY: I have a terrific crush on my family doctor. I am a happily married young woman with children and it annoys me to have this doctor on my mind all day. I told my

In the areas that for the most part operate only three to four months a year.

Young shouts "idle minds brings about discontent and dissatisfaction." He is initiating a program whereby other departments in the state will look to his corner—he to theirs—for the film which will bring about a brighter employment picture.

Young, native of New Jersey, terms unemployment "the costliest era." And he plans to do something about it. However, insiders claim Young has the hardest job of any cabinet member in Harrisburg. Not only is his problem to find jobs but also to make labor and management see eye to eye. Some feel the latter alone is an almost impossible task.

Edwin Thompkins, director of the Legislative Reference Bureau and a former Republican assemblyman from Cameron County, made an interesting comment at the recent editors seminar on State Government.

Thompkins said that legislation by rule and regulations is growing rapidly in Pennsylvania. He pointed out, "We grant the bureau the right to carry into effect the laws we make. But this is getting out of control. The rules and regulations are stifling. Laws by bureaucrats has become a second supergovernment."

Thompkins concluded with this statement, "The General Assembly was only one of four lawmaking bodies in the state. The others: bureaucrats, executive orders and the will of the federal government."

Wanted: Consistency

Despite successive announcements of steel company selective price rises, the question of what kind of economy we are to have in the future is a lot clearer than it was a year ago. President Kennedy, taking a long breath, has indicated that he has no intention of trying to manage specific prices from the White House. He has, thank Heaven, affirmed his belief in a competitive economy.

But now that we are assured that the President believes in free prices, or in what used to be called the higgling of the market, the point of consistency rises.

In support of his judgment that "selected price adjustments, up or down," are legitimate evidence that the competitive capitalist system is working as it should work, the President has reaffirmed his opposition to a "general across-the-board price increase in steel."

He seems to think that any such broad action by the big bellwether companies would be tacit indication of collusion aimed at undermining the spirit of our anti-trust legislation.

And, though "Gary dinners," or get-togethers of steel corporation bigwigs bent on what might be called price fraternization, went out of fashion long ago, the President could be right in his suspicions.

There is nothing inconsistent in his being for selective price increases and against "across the board" action.

The real test of Presidential consistency, both logical and moral, would come if and when the United Steelworkers union decides to reopen its contract, as it is entitled to do any time before May 1.

The Steelworkers have become accustomed to making identical demands on all the companies, and a modern steel strike is always a universal thing. In short, the union presided over by David J. McDonald insists on "across the board" action. And, though it is fashionable to argue that wages are not a "commodity" and should therefore be exempted from anti-trust laws, the USW's habit of making across the board demands concerning the price of wages is a function of a monopolistic position.

The money paid for labor is just as much a cost as is the money paid for coal or iron ore, and if the terms for its payment are exacted at across the board pistol point it can hardly be said that free competition prevails.

The White House, if its reputation for moral consistency is to be retained, should therefore be just as adamant in opposing a strike aimed at all the steel companies at once as it is in objecting to a universalized increase in carbon steel prices.

Whether the USW, in the present atmosphere, would deem it wise to put President Kennedy's reputation for consistency on the spot is an open question. To begin with, steel activity, though it has risen to some 80 per cent of the rated capacity which the mills had in 1960, is by no means certain to remain at that level.

Steel is no longer the dominating factor in the economy. It fights aluminum, plastics, glass, laminated wood, and a whole host of other materials, in a bewildering variety of markets.

Aluminum and galvanized iron compete for the roofing market; fruit juice can be put up in aluminum cans; the curtain walls of big high-rise buildings can be made of either aluminum or stainless steel.

So the probability that any big across the board increase in steel prices can be made to stick has disappeared.

Since a buyers' market still pertains in virtually all steel products (automotive body sheet may be an exception), the USW would be singularly ill-advised if it were to ask for a big across the board wage increase this May.

To preserve its jobs, the steelworkers' union should be helping to promote the efficiency of the all-too-numerous high-cost marginal steel mills. This means it should try to write contracts with the smaller marginal companies in which efficiency sharing is linked to profit sharing.

Any other method of trying to extract higher wages from the steel companies is bound to be self-defeating.

At the moment USW President McDonald, resting at Palm Springs in California, is fighting to restore his health after a serious virus infection. His other problem is to restore the health of his union — and this calls for desisting from making any big across the board demands whatsoever.

Bill Would Regulate Petitions

HARRISBURG—Rep. James A. O'Donnell of Bethlehem, has introduced a bill which would tighten the laws on circulation of nominating petitions.

The bill would require that nominating petitions be issued by the county elections board only upon personal appearance of the person seeking office.

A recent photograph of the proposed candidate would be attached to the petition and remain on it while it is circulated and filed.

Under the measure, the first petition would be free and additional ones would cost 50 cents each. The bill would eliminate some reported questionable practices in recent years of petitions circulated for one office and then changed for another.

Specialty counselors are proficient in some activity such as music, dancing, arts and crafts, water safety, archery, riflery and tennis.

"The opportunities for tips exists in several of the camps participating in the interviews," Dougherty said.

'Grundslow' Group Plan Festivities

MORE THAN 150 will attend the annual banquet of Grundslow Lodge (Numer Tzaea (10) un da Braidkeppicha Grick) on Saturday evening at 7 o'clock in the main dining hall of the State College in East Stroudsburg.

Dr. Floyd Shafer, Habtmon of the local weather predictors, said last night that two of the Pennsylvania Dutch's finest spokesmen have been engaged as speakers. The articulate grundslowmen who will address the local lodge are Sterling Zimmerman of New Tripoli and Dean Stein of Millersville.

A typical Pennsylvania Dutch dinner will be served family style. Dr. Robert P. Oplinger of Northampton, Habtmon of Lodge Numer Ains, will administer the Eighth Degree. A Pennsylvania German band will provide accompaniment for singing and also present dinner music.

In addition to Habtman Dr. Shafer other Rawd members attending will be James Koppenhaver, Rev. William F. Wunder, Rev. William C. Leopold, Theodore Henning, Lester A. Miller, Ralph E. Shupp, Carl Weller, Walter Smith, James Gould, Lester Rice, Victor Henning and Joseph E. Altomose.

In the fact that their mascot, the perennial little rodent called "Grundslow," has again prognosticated with unerring precision the exact time of King Winter's demise and the advent of Spring.

The House Of The Week

Now A Country Type House On A City Size Lot

By Jules Loh

AN EIGHT-ROOM country type ranch house which will fit comfortably on a 65-foot city lot sounds like a househunter's dream.

But here it is. A masterpiece of budget housing.

Today's House of the Week not only has four bedrooms, but its L-shape design, together with an excellent choice of exterior materials, give it a distinctive character and a warm and expensive look. Board and batten siding, wood shingles and a touch of ship-lap combine with an arched portico and shuttered windows for a particularly homespun flavor.

The house, designed by architect Samuel Paul as J-69 in the weekly series, contains only 1,295 square feet of basic living area in over-all dimensions of 52 feet, four inches wide by 52 feet, 10 inches deep.

Architect Paul has left a couple of major decisions to the owners.

For one, the house can be built either with or without a basement. A full basement would mean an extra 1,394 square feet. The stairs would be located in the heater space.

The other option is the location of the dining room walls. Paul shows dotted lines on the accompanying floor plan, signifying that the room can open either to the living room or the family room or both.

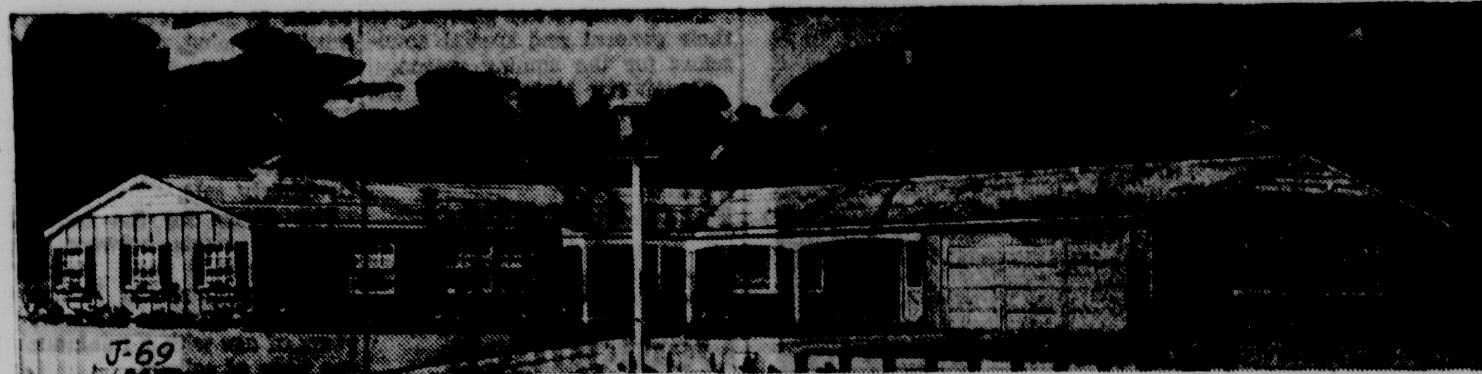

"The dining room bridges the formal and informal living area," said Paul. "With neither wall you achieve a visually expanded living area and no clear separation of these two zones, a plan some prefer. Or you could expand either the formal or the informal zone, depending on your need."

The kitchen is especially well located in this house. A window is over the sink counter, which means that from that spot a housewife has full view of all three entrances to the house—front, side and rear. Moreover, the kitchen is convenient to all these entrances, a perfect hub for all day-light activity. A Dutch door, which can function as a serving counter, leads to the dining room.

Additional Details

Paul has designed an extremely logical and efficient bathroom arrangement for this house, a feature which adds both glamor and economy, two virtues which customarily are incompatible.

He has split the main bath into two compartments with a separate bathing room toward the rear. The bathing room also is accessible directly from the lavatory adjoining the master bedroom. Equally noteworthy is the absence of a conventional tub. This one is a built-in Roman tub, sunken be-

FARMHOUSE FLAVOR: An arched portico, shuttered windows and a distinctive L-shape give a homey look to this eight-room ranch. The house has three or four bedrooms, one and one-half baths. Laundry and service facilities are on the main level and a full cellar is optional.

low the floor level with wide marble ledges, a tile step and a translucent sliding door.

The living room is large, with plenty of wall space, cross ventilation and a picture window overlooking the rear terrace. The family room also is attractive, with windows at front and rear, overlooking the front portico and the rear porch. A door leads to the covered rear porch; and note the built-in cabinet for the TV or hi-fi.

J-69 STATISTICS

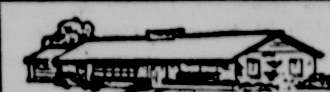

An eight room house containing 1,295 square feet in basic house; 134 square feet in laundry-storage area; 241 square feet in garage. Optional cellar would add 1,394 square feet. Over-all Dimensions are 52 feet, four inches wide by 52 feet, 10 inches deep in L-shape. Garage adds 11 feet, eight inches to width and four feet to depth. Minimum lot size: 65 feet by 100 feet. Basic exterior materials: Wood shingles, board and batten siding.

FLOOR PLAN: The basic house contains 1,295 square feet; laundry and heater room adds 134 square feet; garage is 241 square feet. If 1,394-square-foot cellar is added the stairs would be located in the heater space. Note the dual use of the bathing section of the main bathroom.

FHA Loans Are Available For Home Modernization

WHEN built-in appliances are planned as part of a kitchen modernization project, the Federal Housing Administration encourages families to take advantage of a low-cost, FHA-insured Title I loan to finance the job.

FHA officials point out that this is because new, built-in appliances in a modernized kitchen add permanent value to a house and increase the general welfare of the family occupying it.

An FHA-insured loan for kitchen improvement offers the advantage of five years to repay. For example, $3,500 can be repaid in monthly installments of $71.89. There are some additional facts about these loans of interest to any family.

Loans Insured

FHA does not lend money. Instead, it insures loans made by banks, savings and loan associations and other authorized lending institutions.

Maximum amount that may be borrowed under Title I is $3,500.

FHA does not inspect the job or guarantee materials or workmanship under Title I. It's up to the home owner to protect his own interests.

Application for a Title I home improvement loan may be made to an authorized lending institution by either the borrower or the contractor assigned to do the work.

Sign Certificate

To guard against a small but active group of unethical remodeling contractors, FHA urges families to deal only with established, reputable firms. If in doubt check with the Better Business Bureau, bank or Chamber of Commerce.

"Sign the completion certificate," FHA warns, "only when the job has been completed in accordance with your contract or sales agreement."

BECAUSE water is a better conveyor of heat than air, large amounts of heat can be transported in the small diameter pipe or tubing of a hydronic heating system.

10,000-Man Patronage Plums

Politics Plagued Highways

By JACK LYNCH

HARRISBURG (AP) — Politics has plagued the state Highways Department during most of its 60-year history.

The 10,000-man field maintenance force is one of the largest patronage plums available to the winning party in gubernatorial election years.

Politicians use the promise of more and better roads to win votes.

Gov. Scranton charged last month that Democrats, when in control of the department, built more roads than they should have and padded the maintenance payroll for the 1962 election.

Former Gov. David L. Lawrence directed the department to give local municipalities last October, a month before the election, some $7.2 million not due to them until April, 1963, as their share of the 1961 gas tax increase.

Only last week the U.S. Civil Service Commission said that Carl Wild, holdover deputy secretary of highways, had told department employees last year they would have to purchase $100 tickets for a Democratic fund raising dinner in September.

No matter how competent and conscientious a secretary of highways may be, he must listen to the politicians who demand more and better roads for their districts.

On Stage

Acting Highways Secretary Wilburg C. Webb noted this fact in a speech last month at a contractors convention.

"Although the best technical analysis and decision making techniques are being employed in determining road improvements which would provide the best transportation solution, the total decision making function is by necessity played on the stage of the political arena."

Webb also turned the spotlight on the practice of the legislature which transfers hundreds of miles of local roads to the swiftly expanding state highways system every two years.

The practice, said Webb, "has added a very substantial obstacle toward expanding or even continuing the rate of highway construction."

chairman of the Senate Highways Committee.

It touched off an hour long debate, not about road transfers but about the number of employees on the Highways Department's maintenance force during election years.

Records going back to 1950 show that the department under both Republicans and Democrats added as many as 2,000 additional employees to the field maintenance force in the months before gubernatorial elections.

The payroll swelled under the Democrats in 1962 and 1958 and the Republicans in 1954 and 1950 elections for governor.

The additional employees last year cost between $4 and $5 million, according to Republican estimates.

The new administration in the Highways Department ran into a snag at the outset with its program for replacing Democrats with Republicans.

The patronage changeover in county superintendents was effected without a hitch, but the discharge of more than 500 employees in the field forces aroused a union representing some of the men.

Demonstrations

Three weeks of demonstrations and picketing, even at the Capitol, followed before the situation simmered down. Additional employees were fired for taking part in the demonstrations.

Lester Burlein, Republican chairman of Wayne County and deputy secretary of highways in charge of personnel, remarked during the dispute that the dismissals "helped accelerate the takeover."

Sen. James Beniger, Republican floor leader, probably summed up the situation of politics in highways as well as anyone when he said during Senate debate:

"We have no idea of standing here and saying that certain positions in the Highways Department need not be politically sponsored because they are, they always have been, and, until the millennium comes, they probably will be."

Sands Heads B'nai B'rith Show At Eastburg Temple

HY SANDS, dynamic young yiddish-American comedian who has entertained audiences from coast-to-coast, will be guest entertainer at the B'nai B'rith Lodge No. 1299 of Stroudsburg "Night in Israel."

It was announced yesterday by Louis Sommers, chairman of the Stroudsburg Israel Bond Committee.

The festival will take place on Sunday night, April 21, at 8 o'clock in the Vestry of Temple Israel, East Stroudsburg.

Spending To Increase

NEW YORK (AP) — The Research Institute of America said a survey indicates that business capital spending for the second half of this year will increase beyond general expectations to $41.90 billion. The Department of Commerce has estimated it at $39.10 billion.

CORNELL University, founded in 1865, is the youngest of the Ivy League schools.

"In Israel's 15th year of independence and at the commencement of the redemption of the first Israel Bonds issued 12 years ago, B'nai B'rith can be proud of the role it has played in Israel's economic development through its participation in the Israel Bond campaign," stated Sommers.

"I know that the 'Night in Israel' will be a thrilling evening for everyone who has shared in this historic effort, and that the appearance of Mr. Sands will make it truly memorable."

Born on New York's Lower East Side, Sands is the son of a cantor, from whom he learned the traditions and rich folklore of Jewish life that have endeared him to his audiences. He was a boy soprano in Cantor Rosenblatt's Choir, and earned himself the reputation of a first-class mimic because of the imitations he did of others in the choir.

His natural capacity as a mimic started him on his entertainment career. He performed while in school and, graduating into the depression when no jobs were available, he turned to the entertainment field.

Sands' career in the famous Catskill Mountain borscht belt, and in supper clubs in Miami, Las Vegas, Chicago and other noted centers, was interrupted by service during the war. Upon his return home he worked with Barney Ross in going from home to home to collect used military uniforms for shipment to the Hagana.

The State of Israel Bond Issue is the central source of investment capital for Israel's historic program of economic development. Proceeds derived through the sale of Israel Bonds are making possible the building of permanent homes, the growth of industry and agriculture, the expansion of irrigation, the construction of roads, harbors and railways, the increase of electric power, and the exploitation of natural resources.

IT'S SWINGIN' time again in the Poconos—and the swing in the spring here is mostly on the golf courses.

From the duffer to the scratch player the Poconos offer more than 30 courses, including eight layouts in true championship form which are capable of holding any professional event. Other area courses range in length from a 2,200 yard, nine-hole layout to the 7,200-yard (back tees) course.

Owners of the various courses throughout the picturesque Poconos report the greens in top shape. And the golfers apparently are wasting no time dusting off their bags and getting back once again "into the swing of things."

Newer Additions

Among the newer additions to the Pocono's huge array of golf layouts is a miniature 18-hole course along Route 611—the Continental Miniature Golf Course opened only last year.

Pro Paul Patten is back for his third year at Glen Brook Country Club and he reports the course is in "excellent condition." Responsible for the fine condition, he says, is head groundskeeper John Andress who has carried out a program of enlarging the teeing areas on most of the 18 holes.

The barroom has been renovated and the first series of six motel-type housekeeping units are nearly completed for use by visiting golfers.

Glen Brook
Glen Brook's championship course measures 6,508 yards and is the only par 73 course in the area. Its 16th hole, 150-yard par three, is one of the toughest in these parts. John Kupice is the teaching pro.

One of the leading golf spots in the East, of course, is Shawnee Country Club headed by internationally-known Fred Waring. Located on the banks of the Delaware, the Shawnee Inn has been in existence since 1911. Under Waring's guiding hand, the recent years have been a consistent program of development. Today, Shawnee is regarded as the "Golf Capital of the East."

Four tee positions are offered on every hole. This makes it possible to extend the play from 5,800 yards on the yellow course to 7,200 yards on the white. Par is 72.

Returning as director of golf activities is Jack Cummins. Jack White is the pro and Paul C. Grant is the inn keeper.

Shawnee And Gleason

Shawnee is the home of the 1938 PGA championship and the 1961 Arnold Palmer-Jackie Gleason match in Sunday Sports Spectacular. Gleason, who also appeared at Shawnee last year, is one of the more frequent visitors to the course.

The 18-hole championship golf course at Pocono Manor Inn officially opens Saturday and remains under the supervision of Jack Cuttle, head golf pro, and Art Wall, Jr., tournament pro. Wall recently competed in the Masters.

According to John M. Crandall, general manager of the Inn, "the greens are in better condition than any previous spring and I can recall—possibly because of our very wet winter."

Pocono Manor is some 1800 feet high in the Poconos and Wall is the 1959 PGA "Golf of the Year." He also holds the Manor course record of 63. Cuttle has been stationed at the Manor for the past 38 years.

The Manor is located 15 miles north of Stroudsburg.

Tough Tamiment

Tamiment's golf course, designed by Robert Trent Jones, earns the title of the toughest challenge in the area. Located 12 miles from Stroudsburg, it cost more than $750,000 to build. From three Tamiment-in-the-Poconos holes it is possible to see 20 miles in any direction.

Tamiment also is the home of the Danny Kaye Pro-Am Tournament. It was held in September last year but is expected to be moved up this year.

The 17th hole on the course, two years in the making, was opened last year. Cost was estimated at $30,000 for construction.

Mountain Manor

Veteran Ray Lambert heads Mountain Manor Inn on Route 209 at Marshalls Creek and is probably the most played course in the area. Lambert is a senior PGA member. The course has a layout of 27 holes with nine of them a par-three setup.

Water Gap Country Club (Wolf Hollow) is home of the 1927 and '28 Eastern Opens. The Gap's 12th hole is only 120 yards long but earned the name "Hagen's Folly" after the Hagg took a 12 on it in the Eastern Open. Sam Kinder, an excellent player, is the Water Gap pro. WGCC is a private club but arrangements can be made to play the course.

The Inn at Buck Hill is also the birthplace of Pocono golf. The first round was played there in 1909 about seven years after its construction had begun. Ted Beadle is on his 18th year at the Hill and Harry Drennan, golf manager, is in his 42nd season.

At Skytop

Harold Calloway is the head of Skytop which was founded in 1928. It rarely allows outside play, however, reserving its course for some 3,000 members and resort guests. At Vacation Valley, free golf lessons are given to guests who stay a week and pays a week's $7 greens fees. The Vacation Valley course is 3,000 yards long and includes a 580-yard seventh hole.

Blue Mountain Golf Course, located a half mile east of Saylor's Lake, is owned and operated by Bert and Grant Knowles. It has a challenging nine-hole regulation course with natural obstacles.

A complete golf shop is maintained on the premises. "The Knowles" report the greens in good shape. Indian Mountain Golf Course, a public course, located in Kresgeville, is often referred to as "the public's country club." It offers 3,200 yards of scenic beauty. The greens on this course in the western Poconos have been improved and the course is one to challenge any golfer.

At Tannersville is The Randall's Woodmont Lodge and Golf Course.

The nine-hole layout is a fairly rugged challenging course.

Fernwood has a nine-hole course and is located on Route 209 east of East Stroudsburg.

Vance Megard, Jr., who also owns Indian Mountain Golf Course, is head of Wiscasset, too, which is located a mile-and-a-half south of Mt. Pocono on Route 611 and has proven popular with visitors and home golfers alike.

New tee-offs have been constructed and will be in operation a little later in the season. The Megard circuit of courses now stands at nine nine-hole courses located in Cresco, Mt. Pocono, Bartonsville, Pocono Lake, Blakeslee, Wind Gap, Shohola, Northumberland and Sunbury.

Other public courses are Mount Pocono Golf and Bush's Golf Course.

If You Don't Know Rules It Can Hurt

WHETHER you are a scratch golfer or shoot an inglorious 120 strokes per 18 holes, it pays to know the Rules of Golf. What you don't know can hurt your score.

"The rules not only impose penalties," said Philip H. Strubing, general counsel of the U. S. Golf Association, "they grant privileges. Knowledge of these privileges can often help the player lower his score."

Strubing, a member of Sunnybrook GC and the ranking USGA officer in the Philadelphia district, asked: "How many players know that a ball does not have to be in casual water or ground under repair in order to entitle him relief from these conditions?"

Free Drop

"Rule 32.2," said the former Princeton halfback in answer to his own question, "gives a player the privilege of a free drop if those conditions interfere with his stance, stroke or backward movement of his club for the stroke."

"A comparable privilege applies to an immovable obstruction and there are a number of other situations from which a player can obtain relief."

Strubing also pointed out that a golfer gets added fun from the game when he plays by the rules.

"He has the satisfaction of knowing," Strubing continued, "whether he scores 70 or 100 for the round, that he is not playing some other game devised by his cronies, his club or folks in his area."

Play Percentages

"Beyond this, he will begin to understand the design of certain holes on his course—why hazards were placed where they are, why the green was located where it is and so on. And when he watches the experts, either on television or in person, he will understand why they play certain shots the way they do—that they are playing percentages to avoid unnecessary penalties or particularly hazardous conditions."

Here are some of the most commonly asked questions, and their answers, on the Rules of Golf.

During a PGA tournament, Don January waited seven minutes for a ball hanging on the lip to drop into the cup. How long can a golfer wait?

If there is reasonable doubt that the ball has stopped, a player is allowed a momentary delay to settle the question. The intent of the rules is to mean a short period such as a few seconds and not minutes.

The Final Word

In a big-time tournament, the rules committee man is the final word, and he often stretches the interpretation. This past Thursday, in the Masters, Tommy Bolt was allowed a three and a half minute delay—and it was worth the wait for Bolt. The ball dropped in.

Arnold Palmer's ball was moved by a bee on a green during the last Phoenix Open. Why wasn't he penalized?

Because the ball was moved by an outside agency, defined as any agency not part of the match. If a ball at rest is moved by an opponent, a fellow competitor or a caddy, or any outside agency except the wind, the player may place the ball on the spot from which it was moved and there is no penalty.

In this instance, Palmer had not addressed the ball. If a ball moves after the player has addressed it, it is deemed that the player caused it to move and he is given a penalty stroke. The ball must then be played as it lies.

Winter Rules

Winter rules are used at our club in the spring to protect the turf. What do the rules say about improving your lie?

The terms "winter rules" and "preferred lies" are not found in the Rules of Golf because they are not endorsed by the USGA. However, the association recognizes that adverse conditions sometimes make it advisable for a club to adopt preferred lies. In this case, the USGA suggests that the club use this local rule:

"A ball lying on a fairway may be lifted and cleaned, without penalty, and placed within six inches of where it originally lay, not nearer the hole, and so as to preserve as nearly as possible the stance required to play from the original lie."

A golfer drives into the rough and, after searching in vain for two minutes, says he will return to the tee and hit another ball to save time. He asks the others to keep looking. Has he automatically declared the ball lost?

No. The search for a ball may last five minutes unless the player has specifically declared it lost, or unless he continues to play a provisional ball after hitting it from the tee.

No Penalty

What is the ruling in this case? A golfer declared his drive lost after a two-minute search and headed back to the tee. Before he reached it, and before the five-minute allowance had expired, the ball was found.

The player may continue to play the ball without penalty. A player believes his shot is out of bounds. He returns to the place from which he played the shot drops another ball and plays it. Then the first ball is found in bounds a certain five minutes from the start of the search. Which ball does he play?

The first ball. However, if the player had declared the first ball lost and taken the stroke-and-distance penalty, he would have to play the second ball.

Under a local rule a golfer lifts his ball, but before dropping it, he brushes away leaves from the drop area. What is the penalty?

None. A player may remove any loose impediment provided the impediment and ball do not lie in or touch a hazard. After balls are marked on a green a player puts from the incorrect place. He holes out the putt. Is there a penalty?

Loses Hole

In stroke play it is two strokes, in addition to the putt taken. In match play the golfer loses the hole.

May a golfer press down or move the rough so he can see the ball when he plays it?

No. A player is not of necessity entitled to see the ball. Moreover, irregularities of surface which could affect the lie of the ball may not be removed or pressed down by the player, his partner nor caddy, except when tending a ball or in repairing damage to the green.

What are "loose impediments" and "obstructions?"

Natural objects that are not fixed or growing, and not adhering to the ball, are called loose impediments. An obstruction is anything artificial, whether erected, placed or left on the course. The following are not obstructions: objects defining out of bounds; artificially constructed roads and paths; construction which is an integral part of the course such as retaining walls of hazards.

Impediments
Any loose impediment may be removed without penalty when both the impediment and ball lie in or touch a hazard. When a ball is in motion, a loose impediment shall not be removed. If the ball moves when an impediment is removed, there is a one-stroke penalty and the ball shall be played as it lies.

If the ball lies on or touches an immovable obstruction, or if an immovable obstruction is within two club lengths of the ball and interferes with the player's stance, stroke or backward movement of his club, the ball may be lifted without penalty. It may be dropped within two club lengths of that point, but must not be nearer to the hole than its original position.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

For someone whose idea of music is something to dance to, march by or you sing in church on Sunday morning, I get more excited by the prospect of the Philadelphia Symphony making the Poconos their summer home than seems reasonable.

Excited enough at any rate, to sacrifice some prime sleeping time to go to a breakfast meeting at Pocono Manor and to come back to wrestle mightily with the problem of reporting that discussion without distortion, fairly presenting the problems as well as the breath-taking possibilities.

Why? It's a question I asked myself wearily as, drained of energy and any other ideas, I tackled my own work. I can't remember the name of the music teacher in my high school days who started a school orchestra. I do remember that everybody who could scrounge up a violin was in it, but that he requested me, please, not to make any noise in the concert but just to stay away as if I were playing.

So, how come all of a sudden, am I such an authority on the world-famous Philadelphia Symphony? For so many years I've agonized with you over the details of a wedding, worried with you over the success or failure of a benefit performance or a fund-raising campaign and rejoiced over the new babies and the good time you had at your parties, so that when you get excited about the orchestra, I get excited too.

And you've been talking about it whenever I've gone. Some for your own sakes, because you honestly like good music. Some because of the opportunities you think it would offer your children. Some because of what it would mean to the community in terms of world prestige.

Maybe by the time it's settled one way or another, I'll even know a bassoon from an oboe.

Let's talk Fashion

With all the buds about to burst into bloom, most women yearn to, too, with lots and lots and LOTS of new clothes. Well, the quickest and most inexpensive way to triple a wardrobe is with skirts and blouses.

Especially overblouses, which not only are the season's highest fashion note but which are also cool and look equally well with skirts, shorts or slacks, of which we have an imposing array to match the most luxurious assortment of overblouses we've ever had.

There are travel prints and early American prints with amusing patterns. We've got misty florals and sort of landscape-y prints that look like water colors and splashy futuristic prints as gay as a fountain. Our favorite is a border print that might have been copied from the illustrations for a Persian fairy tale—and most of them are drip dry.

So if you'd like to have the feeling that you've got a bride's trousseau and yet plan to squeeze it out of the food budget, come on in.

For Suspended Stars

Paul, Karras Out For '63

NEW YORK (AP)—Paul Hornung and Alex Karras can hope for reinstatement by 1964 if they avoid betting on football games and shun bettors or undesirable. "Their future course of conduct and their attitude would be important," said Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League who indefinitely suspended Hornung, the Green Bay ace, and Karras, 250-pound Detroit tackle, Wednesday.

"They must avoid the things they were found to have done before—betting and associations," said Rozelle in his office. He repeated he would not even consider a review of their cases until after the 1963 season.

Samples Opinion

Rozelle had been sampling opinion about his drastic action, following a lengthy investigation. He had suspended the two stars indefinitely, fined five other Detroit players $2,000 each for betting on the 1962 title game and fined the Detroit club $4,000 for failing to keep a closer check on its players.

"Within the league, I would say the reaction has been very, very good," said Rozelle. "I have not had a chance to read all the columns. As far as the public is concerned it is too early for any mail. I have one wire from a man in New England who thinks I was too harsh on Hornung."

"The effect of all of this, I would hope, will be good. We did not find evidence of any of the major things that had been mentioned in rumors and no one else did, apparently. I think this reflects on the credibility and integrity of the game."

"Varying Degrees"

"There are varying degrees of offenses. Some we can't condone although they may not be morally wrong. We did not find any evidence of players shaving points or taking money from gamblers."

Rozelle re-emphasized that the case of the five other Detroit players—Joe Schmidt, John Gordy Gary Lowe, Wayne Walker and Sam Williams—should be put in its proper perspective. He pointed out that his original statement called their one-time violation "x x x an act that cannot be condoned because of the strict rules of the NFL but one that should in no way adversely affect the reputation of those involved."

Rozelle declined to set any date for the completion of the investigation of Carroll Rosenbloom, owner of the Baltimore Colts. However, it was pointed out that the original announcement read that Rosenbloom denied charges of betting on league games and that each individual making the charges had since repudiated or withdrawn the allegations in affidavits or signed statements.

Hornung's Betting

Asked how the investigation of Hornung's betting had developed, Rozelle said:

"We developed information of phone calls in a certain pattern. Paul talked to someone. We didn't know who. We called him in and Paul told us."

Rozelle said Karras has been questioned in Miami in early January and that the league was aware that his betting covered more than cigarettes and cigars as he said in a television interview. The commissioner said Karras has acknowledged the betting in the course of several meetings.

Both the American Football League and the Canadian League have closed their doors to the suspended players. However, Jim Trimble, coach of the Montreal Alouettes, said he was placing Hornung and Karras on the club's negotiation list just in case.

Golf's New Golden Boy

Nicklaus Stops Calorie-Count

NEW YORK (AP) Calories don't count—or do they?—with golf's new Golden Boy, Jack Nicklaus.

When calories go down, do his scores go up? Is it true that the scales—and not Arnold Palmer—pose the greatest threat to Jackie's rise to the No. 1 position among the world's par-smashers? "I get a little tired of reading about my weight problem," the new Masters champion said. "Sure, if I'm not careful, I put on a few pounds. It's a family trait. But it doesn't affect either me or my golf."

er, had trouble with his weight. Bill Casper, who is bigger than I am, does all right. There are others in golf who may be a little heavy, but very little is said about them."

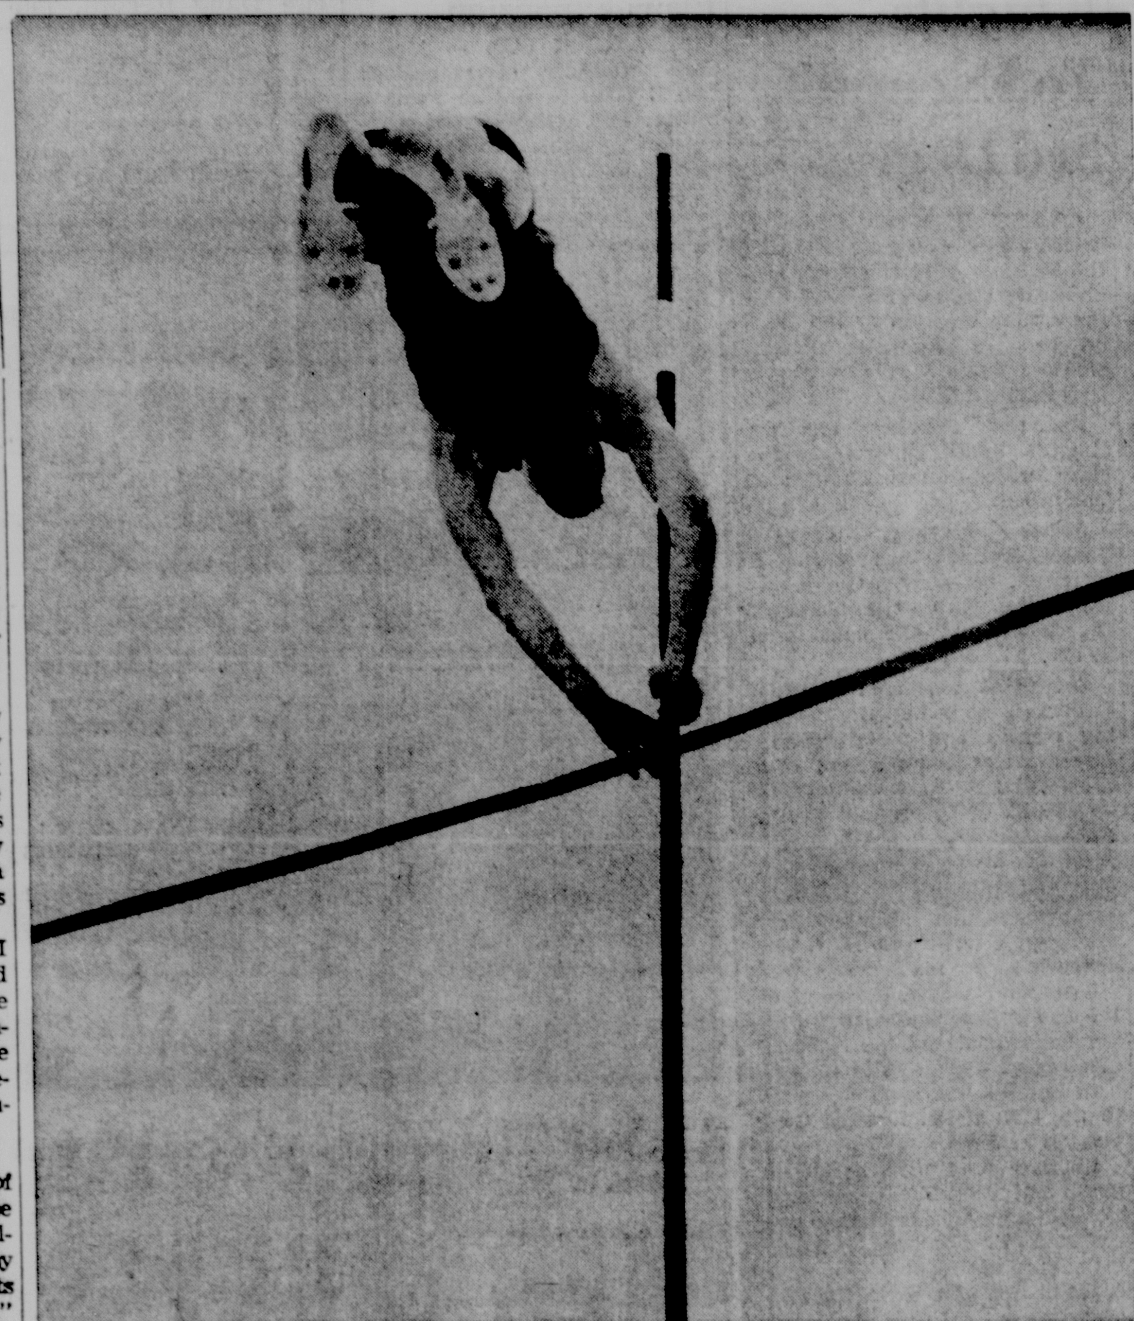

"Fat Boy" Image

The 25-year-old Nicklaus, an easy-going youngster who doesn't offend easily, gets the red neck over constant references to his obesity. His playing companions and best friends have done little to alter the "Fat Boy" image.

When he was an amateur, his Walker Cup teammates christened him "Baby Dumping." At Ohio State, fraternity brothers called him "Bib-o" and "Whaleman." The touring pros kiddingly refer to him as "Ohio Pats."

While Jack probably never will be mistaken for Gregory Peck, these appellations are grossly unfair. He is a robust boy but he is far from being blubbery or an overstuffed freak.

He is 5-foot-11½ and, on the day he won the Masters, he weighed 202 pounds. He has a round face, but no jowls. He gives the impression of being big around the arms and shoulders and much of his

BRITE STAR winner Terry Sandt of Pen Argyl, is shown in his track specialty — the pole vault. Sandt was a triple winner in his first three meets and thus far has broken two school records this year — a leap of 13 feet against Stroud Union and a heave of 150 feet in the discus event against Notre Dame. He was a double winner yesterday, placing first in the pole vault and discus against Parkland. (Staff Photo by MacLeod)

PEN ARGYL—For the first time this season, Terry Sandt failed to be a triple winner for Pen Argyl's track team, but he claimed two first-place finishes in a losing cause as the Green Knights of Coach Elwood Petchel suffered their third loss in four meets, 70-29, to Parkland here yesterday.

Sandt won the discus event with a heave of 145 feet, seven-and-a-half inches, and claimed the pole vault event—his particular specialty—with a leap of 12½ feet. He previously set the school record with a 13-foot leap in the pole vault this year.

Pen Argyl's Rodney was the only other first-place winner for the Knights as he leaped a distance of 19 feet, two inches in the broad jump.

Parkland won all eight other events. The only events in which Pen Argyl gained second place were in the high jump, javelin and shot put. Sandt was the second-place finisher in the shot put—the first time this year he failed to win that event.

Parkland's Gary Wagner was a double winner for the winners, winning the 100-yard dash in 10.4 seconds, and the 220 in 22.8.

THE Stroudsburg A's of the Pocono Mountain Baseball League will open their season Sunday in an exhibition at Washington, N. J., a strong entry in the Tri-Country League. Game time is 3 p. m.

The A's will leave Gordon Giffels Field at 1:15 p. m. On April 27, Washington will come to Stroudsburg for a 3 p. m. engagement. A's manager Dick Miller said last night he would work Doug Frier, Harley Paffenroth and Carl Motts, in that order, against the Jersey team Sunday.

The A's will hold practice Saturday at 2 p. m. All members of the team are urged to be at the practice so they can receive their uniforms for the Sunday exhibition.

Players unable to attend the practice should notify Miller to make other arrangements for their uniforms.

THE teams played cautiously hockey from then until Shack's winner. But the bouncing puck hopped wide of the cage.

With just 5 seconds left, Keon fired the puck the length of the ice into the vacated Detroit net for Toronto's insurance goal.

Stockholders Meet

Eagles' Sale Is Set Today

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Stockholders of the Philadelphia Eagles meet Friday to decide whether to sell the National Football League club, probably to a syndicate headed by Paul Brown, former general manager and coach of the Cleveland Browns.

The 65 holders of 91 units of stock will be asked to vote on the sale question. If a majority of the stock votes to sell, Frank McNamee, the club president, and executive vice president Joe Donahue probably will be appointed to negotiate a deal.

McNamee insists the vote will be only on whether to sell, that no particular buyer will be listed on the ballot. But the Eagle president confirms that Brown has asked about buying the club. He says that as late as three weeks ago Brown reiterated such interest.

Big Price Tag

McNamee said Brown told him that the $4.5 million price tag did not frighten him. Brown has made himself unavailable to newsmen ever since The Associated Press disclosed April 5, that he was trying to purchase the Eagles. His home telephone in Cleveland was not answer, and he reportedly is in Florida.

A letter in the form of a proxy statement was sent by McNamee to stockholders unable to attend Friday's meeting. He asked their vote on whether to sell at a minimum price of $1.5 million which would make each share worth some $50,000. In 1949, 100 "brothers" bought the club, each putting up $3,000. Of the $3,000, $1,800 was in a debenture, which since has been paid—making the original cost of a share of stock, $1,200.

Since the Brown story broke there has been speculation other groups would enter the bidding if the club goes on the block. Brown as yet has not made a specific bid, but is expected to talk dollars and cents if the vote to sell is affirmative.

There seems to be little doubt, however, that in any bidding war, Brown has the inside track because of his immediate acceptability to the league.

Pan-American Athletes Are Shivering

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP)—Unexpected cool weather Thursday had many of the 1,000 athletes from 14 nations already on hand for the fourth Pan-American Games shivering at lively Olympic Village in uniforms designed for the tropics.

Hardest hit by the unseasonal chill were swimmers and divers and entrants from the humid countries of Central America. Youthful spirits went down a bit.

The second contingent of 147 Americans arrived in a chartered plane and the third was due in Friday with most of the remaining 388 Yankee athletes. The newcomers included Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, and Kenneth (Tug) Wilson, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

By Friday village populations should swell to a Pan-American Games record of 2,545 athletes from 24 nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Action also will be taken Friday on the site of the 1967 games. The Pan-American Sports Organization met Thursday afternoon to set the agenda for the Friday conference with the main issue the 1967 site.

The weather appeared to be one of the main topics of the competitors, especially aquatic stars. The temperature was 62 about noon before the sun made a belated appearance.

Aaron Is Leader In Golf Classic

HOUSTON (AP)—Tommy Aaron, an Army supply clerk six months ago, built a 6-under-par 64 with six birdies Thursday to take a one-stroke lead over Nicklaus for the first round lead in the $50,000 Houston Golf Classic.

Nicklaus, the Masters champion had a record-tying 5-under-30 on the front nine but saw a back nine par 35 drop him to a 65. A 12-foot final green putt that would have permitted him to tie Aaron stopped a foot short.

Kermit Zarley, the national collegiate champion from the University of Houston, also saw his last putt stop short but he took over third place with a 33-33-66.

Jerry Seelsmith, a red-haired Californian who missed three championships by a total of five strokes last year as a sophomore on the pro tour, finished minutes ahead of Nicklaus with a record-tying back nine 63 for a four-way tie at 67.

Aaron finished early and had practically no gallery as he posted a 31 front nine and came in with a 33 for the Classic's slowest round score since Jimmy Clark had a 65 in 1951.

Watch Favorites Most of the 18,000 spectators—a first day Classic record—swarmed behind Nicklaus and Gary Player, the co-favorites. Player, with 16 pars and two birdies, had a 34-34-68 for a four-way tie four strokes off the pace.

Arnold Palmer, the third member of golf's Big Three, did not enter the Classic this year. "I'll never have a lower round on this course," said Aaron, a 36-year-old Gainesville, Fla., pro, as he stepped off the 7,021-yard, par 35-35-70 Memorial Park course that was whipped by a 20-mile wind with gusts of 30 miles.

Aaron had to leave the tour last May for six months of military service. His best finish prior to leaving the Army was third place in the Ardmore, Okla., Open last year. His best since returning was last week's 10th place tie in the Greensboro Open.

Phils Lose To Braves On Errors

MILWAUKEE (AP)—A wild throw by catcher Clay Dalrymple, the Philadelphia Phillies' fifth error of the game, gave the first place Milwaukee Braves a ninth inning run and a 6-5 victory Thursday for their seventh straight triumph.

Henry Aaron led off the decisive ninth with a double off Ray Culp. Jack Baldschun came in and walked Eddie Mathews purposely. Norm Larker bunted down the third base line and when Dalrymple threw past third in an attempt to force Aaron, Aaron went home with the winning run. Larker received credit for a single.

Dalrymple's error was his second of the game. Ruben Amaro, Don Hosk and starting pitcher Art Mahaffey also committed errors and Amaro's gave the Braves two of their runs.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day in a puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
